

Atlanta Convention & Visitors Bureau to Host Family Reunion Workshop

ATLANTA (June 9, 2005) — Atlanta is not only known as a travel and tourism destination, but as a popular location to host family reunions. Thus, the Atlanta Convention & Visitors Bureau (ACVB) is pleased to announce that it will sponsor a family reunion workshop on June 26, 2005 in conjunction with the Sheraton Gateway Hotel-Atlanta Airport.

The day's activities include a trip to the Executive Conference Center located at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, followed by an educational seminar with a chance to interact with various representatives of city attractions.

Guest speaker, D'Anotonio Dixon, creator of Black Chronicle, will talk about how the publication branched out of the PBS award-winning civil rights documentary, "Eyes on the Prize" by Henry Hampton, and discuss the importance of learning about families and cultural history through the topic, "Family Reunion Fundraising with History as the Profit."

Workshop attendees interested in touring of the airport conference center should meet at the Sheraton at 11:30 a.m. The workshop begins at 1:00 p.m. at the Sheraton with a site visit of the hotel to follow.

Established in 1913, the ACVB is a private, nonprofit organization created exclusively to sell and market metro Atlanta and Georgia globally as the premier conventions, meetings and tourism destination in the regional, national and international marketplace and favorably impact the Atlanta economy through conventions and tourism.
